

I am appalled and outraged at the decision by Sinclair Broadcasting to force all of their affiliates to air anti-Kerry propaganda on the eve of the election. This is a clear example of how media consolidation leads to abuse of power. It shows how powerful corporations with close ties to influential politicians can sidestep our laws and get away with abusive and deceptive practices. Is there any other explanation for how partisan propaganda can be declared a "newsworthy documentary"? The FCC and the companies that are allowed to use the public airwaves for free need to start doing what they were intended for in the first place: to serve the public interest. Clearly Sinclair is not serving the public interest by taking this action, nor is the FCC serving the public interest by accepting their deceptive justification and letting them get away with it. Thank you.
